A THREAT TO ABDUCT

By M. QUAD

Abraham Scott, who, of course, called Abe by all who called him anything, had reached the age of twenty-five before he fell in love. He had been a farmer's hired man for years and years, and it had come to that point where he was spoken of as an old bachelor and a man whom Cupid could never lead astray.

There is a psychological moment in the life of every human being, and when Abe Scott's moment came one day when he was mowing hay by the roadside. An agent for a patent corn sheller got down from his wagon to take a seat on the fence and have a talk with the sweating mower.

"See here, man," he said, "you are making a slave of yourself, and it isn't right. Why, you ought to have a farm of your own and be working for yourself."

"How am I going to get a farm?" asked Abe as he thought of the hundred dollars saved up in his trunk. "Marry one, and a mighty fine looking widow with it."

"Shoo! Who'd have me?" "Who'd have you? Let's see about that. About twenty-four or twenty-five years old. Strong and rugged. Not handsome, but manly. Good disposition. Would treasure a good wife. Would make a farm blossom in every fence corner. Would be elected county supervisor within two years. Why, man, there are dozens of widows with farms who are waiting for you."

"I never heard of it," said Abe as a thrill came to his heart. "Well, you hear of it now. I've got a widow in mind at this very moment. She's just bought the Smith farm, two miles down the road."

That was a long afternoon for Abe. He had thoughts—many thoughts. He had so many thoughts and he took so much time to wrestle with them that the farmer for whom he worked said to him when supper time came: "Abe, you must have eaten too much pork and beans today, and it tired you out to lug them around."

That evening the hired man did something that astonished the farmer family beyond measure. He dressed up in his best and set off down the road and did not return until midnight. At the breakfast table next morning they tried to pick it out of him, but he was blushing silent. He wouldn't have told for three months' wages, and yet he had only gone on a scout. He had walked past the widow's farm and felt guilty as he did so. On the next evening he did the same thing, but felt bolder. On the third evening he got up the courage to call and ask for a drink of water. The widow fetched the dipper with her own hands and passed a few remarks, and Abe went home feeling what love was. He realized that he was struck on the widow, and yet he felt that she was so far above him that he would never dare approach the subject of matrimony. He said this to the corn sheller agent when he came along, and the man replied:

"I didn't figure that you would do any courting in the ordinary way, but that romance would help you out."

"I guess I'll give it up," said Abe in despair.

"And I guess you won't! I've set out to do a good thing for you, and I'm going to put it through. Now, then, get down here in this fence corner in the shade and let me talk to you like a Dutch uncle."

That lasted an hour. Fortunately for Abe, the farmer was away from home that day; otherwise he would have been down to see if his hired man was asleep. Abe's behavior the rest of the day set the good wife to wondering if he was losing his mind. He was very silent, but she saw on his face a look she had never noticed there before—a look of grim determination. She wondered if he was going to do or die. He didn't leave the house that evening, but the next morning he announced that he was going to the village, two miles beyond the widow's farm. No explanation whatever. He just put on his Sunday best and started off. He was going to call on the widow, not only in broad daylight, but in the forenoon. His knees were weak and his heart thumping, but he forced himself forward. At the gate he gave a gasp, but his legs took him to the side porch, where the woman sat peeling potatoes for the 12 o'clock meal. She recognized him as the man she had served with water, but had not spoken yet when Abe stood before her with uncovered head and said:

"Widow Rodney, I'm Abe Scott, hired man for Farmer Taylor. I'm worth $100 and a hustler to work. I'm in love with you and want you for a wife. I can play on the fiddle, play checkers, and I don't snore. If you don't say yes I'll abduct you and imprison you in a cave until I break your naughty spirit. Answer me yes or no and at once, for I am a man not to be trifled with!"

The widow heard him through and then laughed so heartily that some of the potatoes rolled out of the pan. Abe stood for a moment with a very red face and then turned and walked for the gate. He had almost reached it when the woman called:

"Hold on, there! Come back and let's talk it over!"

Six months later they were married, and for the next ten years the corn sheller man could not think of the incident without exclaiming to himself: "Gosh all hemlock, but what a fool I was!"

IN WOMAN'S REALM

Steep three large mullein leaves in hot vinegar and apply outwardly for rheumatism.

When making puddings and sauces, mix the flour (or cornstarch) and sugar together and avoid lumps.

If an iron teakettle or saucepan boils dry, fill with very hot water; if cold water is poured in, the article will most likely split or crack.

If you use kerosene lamps and would have them burn clear and bright, boil the interior parts of the lamp in vinegar and soda at least once in two weeks.

In choosing poultry, see that the beak and claws of the fowl are soft, not stiff and horny. The bones of young fowls are soft and easily broken.

If copper or brass is very dirty, put some fine salt on a plate; dip into it a cut lemon and run on metal. The strong acid will remove the worst stain.

A dark line around the neck is often caused by wearing stiff, tight collars. Wear a soft stock, and cleanse the neck with a good soap cream and bathe it in cold water.

A small embroidery hoop and a piece of cheesecloth make an excellent strainer for a little milk or something of that sort. It is much easier to manage than the cloth alone.

The fad for wearing the bug hung from the shoulder is a thing of the past. The cords are very much shorter, and the bag is allowed to swing at all, it is from the wrist. More frequently it is carried in the hand which is easier now, for the newest designs are considerably smaller in size.

Before serving dinner place a bowl of boiling water, into which has been dropped a little oil of lavender, on the dining table. This will overcome the closeness of the atmosphere and the odors from the kitchen or pantry which have penetrated into that part of the house.

To prevent accidents with bottles containing poison, buy a dozen tiny bells, and every time a bottle of poison is brought into the house tie a bell to the neck of the bottle. Even in the dark, the bell will tinkle its warning.

A Toast to the Year.

Here's to the year that passes now,
Our hearts to it are warm,
It gave us many a pleasant hour
And more of sun than storm.
It filled the mills with wheat and corn,
And piled the fodder high,
And made the wheels of commerce hum,
But we must say good-bye.

Here's to the year, the glad new year,
Astride the old year's feet,
And may it bring us better things
Than any we have lost.

A brighter hope, a broader faith,
A seed for every clod,
A little less of greed and gain,
A little more of God.

How to Make Frosting.

Frosting is not only decorative, but useful, it not only adds to the flavor of cake, but keeps it fresh and moist, preserving it three or four times longer than if it were not encased in this airtight covering. When it is necessary to make a cake economically, the frosting adds richness and flavor.

The uncooked frostings are especially economical in that they save time and labor, and, furthermore, the frosting is entirely preserved and not wasted as it may be when incorporated in the cake, subject to long cooking in the oven.

After a cake is baked and allowed to cool slightly, the question of frosting arises. When the cake is nearly cooked or while it is cooling, this frosting should be made, and if the cake is to be served at once, the element of time enters largely into the choice—namely, what frosting is best in terms of time. But frosting, and not to be sacrificed even to time, is the choice of frosting that will complement and complete the cake.

The utensils for making frosting are very simple, all of them tending toward the production of a smooth substance: a fine sieve for sifting the sugar, a spatula (preferably wooden) for mixing, and a round-bottomed bowl. A steel spatula or ordinary knife is all that is necessary for spreading a simple frosting, but for ornament and design a pastry bag is necessary. These can be bought with six to twelve tubes capable of making as many designs. The bag itself can be made at home of duck or other stout, closely-woven material.

The material for frosting should be of the very best. Granulated sugar is used for cooked frosting, but confectioner's XXXX sugar in all uncooked frostings. It is very much finer than ordinary powdered sugar, and consequently makes a smoother frosting. Powdered sugar can, of course, be used, but it does not make a perfect frosting. If it is used, it is advisable to sift it through a fine sieve three or four times.

In making an ordinary uncooked frosting, put the amount of egg called for in the recipe into a bowl and add a teaspoonful of water for each egg. This makes a better mixture. Stir into the unbeaten egg very slowly the required amount of sugar, in general, one cupful to one egg. This process must be done slowly and carefully, because in different temperatures and different conditions of the atmosphere, sugar will absorb different amounts of liquid. Be on the look-out for this, so that adherence to the recipe will not cause waste of material.

Very often, even in the case of mixing flour, as well as sugar, the atmospheric condition plays a part with set rules. Stir in the sugar until the mixture is thin enough to spread on the cool cake but thick enough not to run. Then put in the frosting, which is often given character by the addition of a few drops of lemon juice. In white frosting sometimes a few drops of lemon juice makes a better white. Be very careful in stirring not to let portions of the mixture harden on the sides of the bowl, but scrape down immediately with the spatula, as this will prevent lumps.

The foregoing applies in full to any uncooked frosting with eggs and XXXX sugar, as, for example, in the following varieties of frostings: Beaten white of egg and flavoring, unbeaten white of egg and flavoring (so-called confectioner's frosting), beaten yolks and flavoring (yellow frosting), and unbeaten white of egg and equal amounts of water and flavoring.

Uncooked frostings without egg require the same management, except that liquids such as cream, milk, water or fruit juices are substituted for the egg as in frosting with egg already noted.

NEW CLOTH IN PARIS.

The Women Have Adopted Cabman's Material.

An enterprising Paris dressmaker has just launched a practical short tailor costume in a new make of suede cloth. This material is thick, warm and as pliable as velvet.

Tourists have surely noticed it, here in Paris, worn hitherto solely by the cabmen and coachmen. The cab drivers choose this cloth in a dark brown, whereas the private coachmen wear it in black or dark green. This material therefore bears the name of drap de cocher.

Our mondaines are ordering a moderately wide skirt and a kind of Russian jacket in this suede cloth for walking purposes, for shopping, visiting, motoring and general traveling. The cabman cloth is dyed in all the fashionable tints of the moment, yet there seems a general fancy for dark blue, khaki, Havana, myrtle green and bishop violet.

This material does not fray, and owing to its thickness both skirt and jacket are fashioned without a hem. The bordering is simply outlined with a stitching and any form of strapping or braiding is applied. The skirt and jacket, fasten in front. There are several pretty ways of trimming these costumes. One model has three or four large self-colored buttons at the foot of the skirt where the material crosses and three or four again upon the semi-long jacket from the waist upward.

One large triangular rever in cloth starts from the right shoulder, where it is held by a narrow collar in leather, caught in its turn with a square enamel button. The collar appears round the neck from shoulder to shoulder, but only at the back. The plain front width, without a collar band, would seem a trifle bare if it were not partly covered with a wide, knitted jabot in cream Alcacon lace. From the Gentlewoman.

MAY ESCAPE DEATH TRIAL

Rumors Persist That Agreement Will Be Reached

IN THE RICHESON CASE

Welfare of Public Morals Is Cause Assigned by Lawyers Who Credit Truth of Report—Pelletier Talks with Girl's Mother.

Boston, Dec. 30.—Persistent rumors that the Richeson case would never go to trial, in spite of the apparent preparations that are being made, were heard at the courthouse yesterday.

It is believed by many attorneys who are in touch with the case that for the good of the public a settlement may be reached that will obviate a trial.

These rumors arise from the belief that there is a link missing in the chain of evidence which it is claimed that the district attorney has woven around Richeson and also for the apparent failure of Attorney Morse to make certain movements in the case.

It is thought that at the long conference between Chief Justice Aiken and the district attorney a few days ago the question of a compromise was discussed and that the present preparations for the trial were only a preliminary step to some startling move on the part of the district attorney.

It was practically decided yesterday that should the case go to trial it should be held in room 404. This room is on the fourth floor facing on Marlborough square and is ten feet longer than any other jury court room. Should the case be tried in this room an iron pen would have to be erected for the prisoner.

The fifth session will be given over to newspaper men and the first session of the superior court room which adjoins room 404 will be used for witnesses in the case.

The purpose of having the trial on the fourth floor is to avoid interfering with the regular business of the criminal sessions on the second floor. Should the trial be held on the second floor, thousands of interested spectators would so block the halls as to seriously interfere with court business.

District Attorney Pelletier and Assistant District Attorney Lavale went to Brockton yesterday afternoon, where they met Mrs. Lizzie Linnell, the mother of Avis Linnell, for whose murder the Rev. Clarence V. T. Richeson is to be tried on Jan. 15.

They spent the greater part of the afternoon at the home of Mrs. Zida McLean, a sister of the dead girl, where Mrs. Linnell is now staying.

Mrs. Linnell is expected to be one of the principal witnesses for the government when the case goes on trial. Mrs. Linnell was with her daughter a few days before her death in Boston.

SPRECKELS ARRESTED.

Proprietor of "Call" Taken Into Custody on Libel Charge.

San Francisco, Dec. 30.—John D. Spreckels, proprietor; Charles W. Hornbeck, general manager, and Ernest S. Simpson, managing editor of the San Francisco Call, were taken into custody yesterday on a misdemeanor libel charge preferred by H. A. Moss, a stock and grain broker recently convicted in the police court here of having violated a city ordinance against the operation of bucket shops. The three were released on their own recognizance.

Moss, who conducts a business with branches in several cities, was forced to close his San Francisco office as a result of his conviction in the police court. He sued the publishers of the Call, which has taken the lead in a campaign against alleged bucket shops, for $100,000 damages.

Offense alleged in yesterday's complaint is the publication of an editorial denouncing Moss as a swindler and a news item to the same general effect.

SCALES BROKE OUT ALL OVER HER BODY

Scalp Affected, Hair Began to Fall. Hands So Disfigured She Had to Wear Gloves All the Time. Two Hospitals Unable to Assure Cure.

First Application of Cuticura Soap and Ointment Allayed Itching. Psoriasis Has Disappeared.

"Allow me to say a few words in praise of the Cuticura Remedies. About three years ago, I was affected by white scales on my knees and elbows. I consulted a doctor who treated me for ringworm. I saw no change and consulted a specialist and he claimed I had psoriasis. I continued treatments under him for about six months until I saw scales breaking out all over my body and my face. My scalp was affected, and my hair began to fall. I then changed doctors to no avail. I went to two hospitals and each wanted to make a study of the case and seemed unable to cure it or assure me of a cure. I tried several patent medicines and was finally advised by a friend who has used Cuticura on her children since their birth, to purchase the Cuticura Remedies. I purchased a cake of Soap, the Ointment and the Resolvent. After the first application, the itching was allayed."

"I am still using the Soap and Ointment and now feel that none other is good enough for my skin. The psoriasis has disappeared and I everywhere feel better. My hands were so disfigured before using the Cuticura Remedies that I had to wear gloves all the time. Now my body and hands are looking fine." IDLE RICH "PARASITES"

Prof. Farnam of Yale Says Must Be Controlled

IF WE ARE TO CHECK ANARCHY

Conditions Need Study—Bitterly Scores Monkey Dinners and All-Night Snake Dances of the Society.

Washington, Dec. 30.—Declaring the "parasitic rich" in America must be controlled before the advances of socialism and anarchy can be checked, Prof. Henry W. Farnam of Yale, president of the American Economic society, Thursday announced himself in favor of a scientific investigation into the remarkable class that has instituted monkey dinners in Newport and all-night snake dances in New York.

In an address before the American Association for the Advancement of Science, now in session here, Prof. Farnam said:

"It is a matter of common observation that wealthy families in our country often contain a number of parasite members—that is, members who derive a large income from society without rendering any appreciable economic or public services in return."

"We gather the budgets of working-men, but not of clubmen; we collect the statistics of involuntary unemployment, but not of voluntary idleness; our study of social conditions on the east side has not been extended to the west side."

"And yet, how can we understand the causes of national decadence, that great and perennial question of history as well as of practical politics, unless we unflinchingly examine its phenomena during the growing period?"

"These parasite members of the so-called 'leisure class' should be peculiarly useful specimens for economic study in our country, because they are not under the social pressure of the feudal system inherited in the older countries of Europe from times when wealth meant land ownership, and land ownership of necessity involved public duties."

"Many of this class walk our streets, eloquent but unconscious arguments for socialism, terrible examples for the moralist, living texts for sermons, rich material for the problem novelist, but still comparatively neglected by the economist, the sociologist and the statistician."

NEW HAMPSHIRE TAKES CRAWFORD NOTCH

Proceedings By Right of Eminent Domain Are Completed Unless the Owners Appeal.

Concord, N. H., Dec. 30.—Governor Bass and his council at their meeting yesterday afternoon took the final steps so far as they have power, for the taking of Crawford Notch for a reservation by the state of New Hampshire. The taking is by the right of eminent domain. It has been stated that the supreme court of New Hampshire decided that the state could not take the Notch and that it would be cut off by lumbermen. Governor Bass found out, however, that the eminent domain clause was not ruled on by the supreme court and asked the opinion of the attorney-general as to whether they could go on with the taking.

The Attorney-General said they were authorized to act under this clause and could pay for the property from any funds not otherwise appropriated.

Councillor Turner, who has had the matter in charge, yesterday presented a survey of the property and this was filed with the secretary of state, which completes the taking. If the owners do not appeal no further proceedings other than paying for the land will be necessary. If they appeal the supreme court will appoint commissioners to appraise the property and fix damages. The filing of the survey and taking, however, makes Crawford Notch the property of the state already.

NEW MEXICO READY TO ENTER.

Messenger on the Way to Washington With Documents for President Taft.

Washington, Dec. 30.—A messenger left Santa Fe, N. M., yesterday for Washington bearing the certificate of the returning board that the territory has complied with all the requirements of Congress with reference to its admission to the Union. It is expected that the papers will reach the White House next Tuesday and it was stated yesterday morning by Delegate Andrews, that President Taft, after examining them, would issue immediately the proclamation declaring New Mexico to be one of the sisterhood of states. It had been supposed that New Mexico and Arizona would be admitted at the same time, but more delay would ensue in the case of Arizona and the president, it is understood, has decided that New Mexico should not be obliged to wait for her new honors because her neighbor is lagging behind.

Last Words Startling.

Raleigh, N. C., Dec. 30.—"The jury, the court and the governor of North Carolina will be held responsible by God for my murder." With this expression on his lips, L. A. Sandlin of Wilmington, convicted of wife murder, paid the death penalty in the electric chair here yesterday. He was baptized on Thursday night.

Secret Indictments.

Cambridge, Mass., Dec. 30.—Three secret indictments were returned yesterday by the Middlesex grand jury to Judge McLaughlin in the superior court, and bench warrants were immediately issued for the apprehension of certain persons, the names of whom District Attorney Higgins refused to disclose.

LEMON RATE DOWN AGAIN.

Commerce Commission Reaffirms Ruling Previously Upset by Commerce Court.

Washington, Dec. 30.—American lemon growers yesterday won a signal victory over foreign competitors and the transcontinental railroads, when the interstate commerce commission reaffirmed its previous order, upset by the new commerce court, reducing freight rates on lemons from California to all other points in the United States from $1.15 per 100 pounds to $1.

The fight over lemon rates has been on since 1902 and originally involved the question of competition with Sicily. It has been bitterly fought and became one of the first causes of conflict between the interstate commerce commission and the new commerce court. When the commission originally ordered the reduction, its order was stopped by the commerce court, which held the commission had no right to take into consideration the question of foreign competition and remanded the case for rehearing. The decision given yesterday holds the rate of $1.15 unreasonable and unjust, irrespective of the question of competition, and orders the carriers to make effective the lower rate on Feb. 15. The case was brought in the name of the Arlington Heights Fruit exchange against practically all the transcontinental lines.

Milwaukee, Dec. 30.—Howard Wisneja Paulson, a squaw man living two miles below the Indian post on the Chippewa river in this county, on Wednesday, shot his wife, Josephine Cloud, a squaw, and her mother, Mrs. Omakawit.

He went in search of his father-in-law and, failing to find him, returned and shot himself. Their 1-year-old daughter was frozen to death.

People Who Bore You With Talking About Their Children.

In a New Year's talk in the January Women's Home Companion, Margaret E. Saenger reports what a brother said about his own married sister:

"I never dine at Mary's. I used to enjoy going there, but she and Jack are at present so engrossed with the rising generation, that there is no fun in being there. The children are permitted to interrupt conversation; their father and mother stop in the midst of a sentence to answer their questions and to conduct their education; and, worst of all, their wonderful sayings are repeated in their hearing, and a bachelor uncle is frowned upon if he does not rise to the occasion and express his amazement at the brilliant speeches of the small people. When Mary's children are grown, I shall visit her again; but for the present, I drop in only when I think they are safe in bed."
